Number 10

Weekly Overview

Last week the focus remained largely on policy committee hearings as committees continued hearing bills that have been passed by the opposite house. For some bills, the committees had already heard a companion bill, so a lot of testimony was shorter than the first time around. The committees were also getting updated if and how the companion bill had been changed by the house of origin. For other bills that had no companion, the committee members were hearing the bills and testimony for the first time.

Going into the upcoming week there will continue to be hearings and executive session. Policy committees will begin passing bills out of committee as we get closer to the next big milestone this session – opposite house policy cutoff. All bills must pass out of their opposite house policy committee by April 3rd or they will be considered dead (unless they are deemed Necessary to Implement the Budget (NTIB)).

The most anticipated events coming up this week is the release of budgets. The House has announced that they will be releasing their proposed budgets on Monday, March 25th. They will be releasing their proposed operating, capital, and transportation budgets all on that day. The Senate is expected to release their transportation budget on Wednesday and their proposed operating and capital budgets sometime within the next week.

At this point over 2,300 bills have been introduced this session:

- About 1,500 bills made it through the house of origin policy cutoff
- 1,010 bills made it through the house of origin fiscal cutoff
- 684 bills made it through house of origin cutoff. You can see a list of bills still alive here (this does not count bills that have been deemed NTIB).

Upcoming Dates of Note:

April 3, 2019	Last day to read in committee reports (pass bills out of committee and read them into the record on the floor) from opposite house, except House fiscal committees and Senate Ways & Means and Transportation committees.
April 9, 2019	Last day to read in opposite house committee reports (pass bills out of committee and read them into the record on the floor) from House fiscal committees and Senate Ways & Means and Transportation committees.
April 17, 2019	Last day to consider (pass) opposite house bills (5 p.m.) (except initiatives and alternatives to initiatives, budgets and matters necessary to implement budgets, differences between the houses, and matters incident to the interim and closing of the session).

 After the 94th day, only initiatives, alternatives to initiatives, budgets and matters necessary to implement budgets, matters that affect state revenue, messages pertaining to amendments, differences between the houses, and matters incident to the interim and closing of the session may be considered.

March 20th – Budget and Revenue Forecast Special Update

In the first year of the biennium (odd-numbered years), the Washington State Legislature passes three budgets, Operating, Capital, and Transportation. The Operating Budget funds ongoing state activity and is written by the House Appropriations and Senate Ways & Means Committees. The Capital Budget is written by the House Capital Budget Committee and Senate Ways & Means, funding construction in areas such as public schools, parks, prisons, affordable housing, and environmental clean-up. The Transportation Budget is written by the Transportation Committees in each chamber and is largely user-funded with gas taxes, permits, and other licensing fees. In the second year of the biennium (even-numbered years), the Legislature passes three supplemental bills. Bills that have failed to meet fiscal deadlines but can be deemed by leadership to be “Necessary to Implement the Budget” and find new life due to a positive or negative effect on the budget or to earn the vote of a particular member. The budgets are negotiated and passed late in the session and then shuffled between the chambers for amendments and concurrence before arriving at the Governor’s desk. The Governor may issue line item vetoes rather than vetoing an entire budget bill. A 2/3 majority in each chamber is required to override such a veto.

While the Office of Financial Management releases the Governor’s budget in December prior to the start of the biennium, majority party House and Senate budget writers wait until after the formal release of the spring revenue forecast. Washington is unique in its approach to revenue forecasting. The forecast is nonpartisan and is used for budget preparation by both the executive and legislative branches. The work is guided by Washington State Chief Economist Stephen Lerch Ph.D. and the Economic and Revenue Forecast Council, made up of State Treasurer Duane Davidson (R), Senate Ways & Means Chair Senator Christine Rolfes (D-Bainbridge) and Ranking Member Senator John Braun (R-Chehalis), House Finance Ranking Member Ed Orcutt (R-Kalama), House Appropriations Chair Timm Ormsby (D-Spokane), Office of Financial Management Director David Schumacher, and Department of Revenue Director Vikki Smith. Revenue forecasts are to be submitted to the Governor and Legislature on or before March 20th, June 27th, and September 27th in odd-numbered years. In even numbered years, they are submitted on prior to November 20th and February 20th.

This morning, the Economic and Revenue Forecast Council announced state revenues will continue to grow through mid-2021. Projections show an increase of nearly $307 million for the current cycle ending this summer, and $554 million for the next two-year cycle. In total, this is an increase of roughly $861 million more than was previously expected, bringing the state budget to $50.6 billion. Senate Ways & Means Ranking Member Senator John Braun (R-Chehalis) suggested this increase is proof that no new revenue is needed. House Appropriations Chair Representative Timm Ormsby (D-Spokane) disagreed, claiming the budget growth will not adequately address current funding levels or the education investments promised in the resolution of the McCleary court case.

Governor Inslee and Legislative Democrats have for months planned to raise additional revenue through closure of tax preferences, collection of sales tax from out-of-state retailers (adoption of the Wayfair decision in already signed SSB 5581), a capital gains tax, REET (real estate excise tax) or B&O increases on services. Last week’s forecast will be a constant topic of conversation for the rest of the session, majority Democrats are working to create momentum to have sufficient votes in one chamber to agree with the other chamber on the more contentious revenue strategies (capital gains, REET, or B&O increases).
