EXPERIENCE

2002 – Present; 1990-1998

Founding Partner and Principal, Cedar River Group

The Cedar River Group is a Seattle-based public policy consulting firm that specializes in projects in the public interest. Cedar River Group provides a wide range of services to help public agencies, private nonprofit organizations, foundations and corporations conceive and implement projects. Tom's recent projects at Cedar River Group have included: development of the successful 2008 Parks for All Levy package, which provided $148 million for Seattle parks; development of a "sustainability plan" for the Seattle Art Museum; preparation of two successful applications for federal stimulus funds for public health measures, totaling $25 million; creation of Bands of Green, a plan for the development of trails, boulevards and linear parks in Seattle for the Seattle Parks Foundation; development of the Office of Port Jobs and the Apprenticeship Opportunities Program for the Port of Seattle; organizing Friends of the Basic Health Plan for the Fremont Public Association; developing a Strategy to Find Common Ground on Farmworker Housing for the Washington Migrant Health Council and the Governor's Office; the Galer Street Bridge Project for Immunex Corporation; the Skagit Farmland Preservation Project for Skagit County; the Working Landscapes Initiative for the Bullitt Foundation and King County; a study of the re-use of the Sand Point Naval Air Station for the Seattle Homeless Coalition, and the creation of a public/philanthropic partnership to provide services for homeless families, for the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, as well as more than thirty other projects in the fields of community development, park and open space planning and preservation, health care planning, and human services program development.

1998-2001

Deputy Mayor, City of Seattle

As one of two Deputy Mayors, Tom had responsibility for strategic planning, housing, community development, neighborhood programs, land use regulations and permitting, parks and recreation, education, health, human services, human rights, the arts, Seattle Center, and the Seattle Public Library system. In this role he guided development of three successful ballot initiatives which provided nearly $600 million to rebuild the city's library system, redevelop the Opera House and other buildings at Seattle Center; expand the city's network of community centers; and upgrade and expand the parks system. Tom also had oversight responsibility for the administration's implementation of 37 neighborhood plans, and for the creation of the Office for Housing. He played a leadership role in the development of Project Liftoff and Reinvesting in Youth, two major community initiatives to improve early childhood education, expand out-of-school youth programs, and reduce juvenile incarceration.

1980-1990

Special Assistant to the Mayor, City of Seattle

Tom served as special assistant to Mayor Charles Royer during three terms. In that capacity he led Mayor Royer's Human Services and Environmental Cabinets and led the development of the City's Human Services Funding Program, which now provides more than $24 million annually in direct City assistance to community agencies. Tom formed the Mayor's Task Force on the Homeless and oversaw implementation of its recommendations. He led teams prepared the successful Regional Health Facilities Bond measure in 1987, which provided $100 million for public hospitals and clinics, and the $90 million Open Space Bond proposal adopted by the voters in 1989. Tom organized the City's Environmental Coordinating Committee, which managed and successfully resolved a series of major environmental issues including Gas Works Park pollution abatement, removal of PCB contamination at the Lake Union Steam Plant, and the preservation of the 90,000 acre Cedar River Watershed.

Deputy Superintendent, Seattle Parks and Recreation Department

Following the sudden retirement of the Parks Superintendent in 1988, Tom was asked by Mayor Royer to act as interim deputy superintendent to assist in managing the department for an eight month period. In this assignment, Tom initiated the first comprehensive plan for parks and recreation since 1968, negotiated agreements with Burlington Northern Railroad for right-of-way to extend Burke-Gilman Trail, and worked to adapt recreation programs to the needs of poor and single-parent families by creating dawn-to-dusk summer programs and scholarships for low income children in various recreation programs.

1978-1979

Program Coordinator, Mayor's Government Reorganization Project

Tom successfully carried out reorganization of the Seattle-King County Department of Public Health, redesigned the delivery of the agency's personal health services offerings, and forged a partnership between the Department, non-profit community health centers the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital, and other medical institutions to improve health care for low-income populations.

1971-1978

Coordinator, Country Doctor Community Health Center

Tom worked as a member of the team that created a new community health center serving Capitol Hill, and became the first coordinator of the clinic. In that role he secured affiliation agreements with major medical centers to provide backup services to the medically indigent on an ability-to-pay basis. He also led the effort to document the poor health status of the urban poor and worked with Senator Warren Magnuson to create the nation's first major urban National Health Service Corps project and expand the authorization of the Corps to provide health care workers to jails, medical institutions and prisons.

1970-1971

Community Organizer

Tom came to Seattle to work as a field organizer for the anti-war movement in central Seattle. He also worked as part of a team to establish free food programs and community clinics in low-income neighborhoods during the Boeing recession. Prior to 1970, he worked to earn money for college as a shopkeeper's helper, mason's tender, house painter, farm worker, sports reporter and teacher's assistant.
