ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE

Ecological Restoration · Community Outreach · Natural Resource Management

A driven environmental justice advocate aspiring to collaborate and share resources with communities to achieve social justice, environmental health, and community building goals. Deep understanding and track record of how ecological restoration, land use planning, and natural resource management can be applied to address many intersectional issues, especially how to build communities of color and low-income communities resilience to climate change impacts and other social injustices.

CORE COMPETENCIES

- GIS and ArcMap
 - Field Data Collection
 - Statistical Data Analysis
 - Biodiversity Conservation
 - Social Justice
 - Botany and ethnobotany
 - Collaboration
 - Marketing
 - Advocacy

PROFESSIONAL HIGHLIGHTS

- 6/19–9/19 The Harvey Lab, Research Assistant.
- Work centered on questions about the characteristic and consequences of fire in Washington's forests, as well as on long-term dynamics in old-growth forest plots. The lab also has a focus on forest management with multiple stakeholders for long-term sustainability.
 - Experience in measuring tree plots along transects using various techniques.
 - Reference Brian Harvey, [REDACTED]
- 6/18–8/18 Quinault Division of Natural Resources Department in Environmental Protection, Intern, Doris Duke Conservation Scholars Program at UW (Year 2).
- Focused on Moses Prairie Restoration Project doing Vegetation Monitoring to collect data on how bringing back the traditional land management practice of burning help deal with encroaching trees and shrubs, and increase culturally important plant and animal species.
 - Gained experience navigating using compass, map, and GPS; telemetry for animal tracking; collecting data in different transects using quadrants and toe-point methods; water sampling; botany and ethnobotany; data analysis.
 - Reference Greg Eide [REDACTED]
- 1/18–6/18 Urban Forest Restoration Intern, Nature Consortium.
- A grassroots, community-based organization whose mission is to connect people, arts and nature. My role was within the Urban Forest Restoration Program.
- Managed the volunteer email account.
 - Used Sales Force to send out reminder emails for the workdays out at the restoration sites.
 - Managed social media, prepped the van and other equipment prior to the workdays.
 - Set up equipment, the volunteer table and information, and lead the volunteers during work parties at the restoration sites.
 - Educated volunteers of all ages on invasive and native species, the significance of restoring the site and the area's history, and basic plant removal and planting skills. Participated in the plant removal, and planting as well.
 - Reference Caroline Borsenik, [REDACTED]
- 6/17-8/17 Intern, Doris Duke Conservation Scholars Program at UW (Year 1).
- Two-summer 8-week program that focuses on biodiversity conservation, environmental justice and leadership skill development

- Visited wild landscapes, urban neighborhoods, and expansive watersheds where we met and received guidance from conservation professionals and a cross-cultural, creative set of students, instructors and mentors.
 - Learned research techniques, conservation strategies and how to build community relationships to address environmental justice issues.
