Brianna S. Holan, AICP

Brianna Holan has guided a wide range of public and private sector urban design and planning projects, including small and large scale urban infrastructure, district and sub-area plans, streetscape design, and redevelopment studies for various municipalities and private development clients. She also has experience as a public sector planner focusing on land use permitting, long-range visioning, and community engagement.

Brianna is passionate about contextually rooted and sustainable design and development practices that result in community-oriented activated places. She also actively participates in explorations of temporary urban interventions, finding new and dynamic uses for under-utilized spaces in the urban fabric.

She is a certified planner and has carried out many complex interdisciplinary projects throughout the Pacific Northwest and beyond.
