Background: Clarissa has been a proud resident of White Center for 15 years. She is currently a sophomore at Chief Sealth International High School and serves as a representative in Seattle Public School's Sustainability Ambassadors, whose mission is to empower youth to catalyze community sustainability. She is passionate about social justice, environmentalism, and youth empowerment. Aside from being a proud intersectional feminist, she enjoys hiking, swimming, and talking to everyone. Clarissa hopes to bring to light the environmental issues that low-income communities in the Seattle area are facing, along with providing more job and internship opportunities for youth of color. She sees and experiences a major divide in people of color/ low income families being aware of issues that arise in her community of White Center around sustainability and/or equity related problems and is excited to bring attention to this issues and others through her involvement with the Seattle Youth Commission.
