barrier training programs preparing youth through job training, access to GRE or certificate programs, and skill building and (2) a pre-apprenticeship program for at-risk youth ages 16-24, such as Youth Build.

Youth experiencing homelessness and housing instability can lag behind their housed peers in job experience. Low-barrier employment skill building programs can be an effective way to help disconnected youth develop workplace skills and gain stability, enabling them to successfully participate in further job training and educational opportunities.
