Background:

Shankar Narayan is Technology and Liberty Project Director at the ACLU of Washington. He advocates, organizes, and litigates to protect civil liberties in a world transformed by technology. Shankar works to bring values of fairness, transparency, and accountability to surveillance and machine learning technologies, and to lift the voices of impacted communities, including people of color, immigrants, religious and gender minorities, and others. Shankar has helped pass landmark technology laws and campaigned for vendors to build tech in ethical and community-centric ways. For this work, Shankar is the recipient of the 2018 Roberto Maestas Legacy Award from El Centro de la Raza.

For the previous 8 years, Shankar was Legislative Director at the ACLU-WA, where he helped pass legislation to achieve marriage equality, restore voting rights to formerly incarcerated people, enforce non-discrimination laws in schools, improve police accountability, defeat punitive gang legislation, and protect privacy, among others.

Shankar was previously Policy Director at OneAmerica, where he worked on the frontlines of the immigrant rights struggle, and a technology lawyer at K&L Gates. Shankar has served in leadership roles on Seattle's Immigrant and Refugee Advisory Board, Detention Watch Network, the South Asian Bar Association of Washington, the Asian Bar Association of Washington, and the Ethnic Diversity in the Legal Profession Committee. He is a graduate of Bates College, Yale Law School, and Harvard's Kennedy School of Government. Shankar was named King County Bar Association's Outstanding Young Lawyer in 2010.

An immigrant, Shankar grew up in the Soviet Union, U.S., Maldives, India, Yugoslavia, Thailand, and Russia before coming to America. He enjoys the outdoors, travel, motorcycling, and Anatolian shepherds. A poet, he is a four-time Pushcart Prize nominee and a recipient of fellowships and prizes from Kundiman, Hugo House, Flyway, Paper Nautilus, Jack Straw, and 4Culture.
