Snapshot: Federal Immigration Landscape in December and January

Across the country, immigrant families are facing rising fear and uncertainty driven by:

- Travel ban
- Indefinite pause on immigration applications
- Immigrant visa ban for 75 nationalities
- Indefinite pause on asylum
- Re-review of refugee status granted under Biden administration
- Increased immigration enforcement, detention, and deportations
- Fraud rhetoric targeting immigrants' use of public benefits

2025-26 Legal Challenges

- A rapidly evolving legal landscape has increased challenges for communicating with detained clients. Decreases in federal funding and changes to government practices have prolonged detention, forcing some clients to choose deportation rather than pursue relief to avoid further detention.
- Many citizenship appointments are being canceled at a time when changes to the naturalization process are making it harder for permanent residents to become U.S. citizens.

Opportunities To Get Involved

- Many of the organizations we contract with—such as ACRS, WASIN, NWIRP, KCSC, El Centro de la Raza, ReWA, and others—offer volunteer opportunities; visit their websites or social media pages to learn how you can support immigrant and refugee communities.
- OIRA shares regular updates, resources, and event information through our monthly newsletter and on social media, stay connected to stay informed.
- In moments of uncertainty, it's critical to combat the chilling effect by seeking out accurate information, following trusted local organizations, and sharing resources within your networks.
- Your time, your voice, and your action can make a real difference. Make sure you stay engaged and help build a more inclusive Seattle.
