Background: Originally from San Francisco and relatively new to Seattle, I have spent much of my life navigating and noticing what it means to live in a city. To me, city life means being forced to think about the lives of the people all around you. I graduated from the University of Puget Sound in 2019 with a degree in politics and decided to turn my interest in the wellbeing of others into my career. First as an intern for then-senator Kamala Harris, then as an AmeriCorps service member for a non-profit cooking (my other passion!) school. I am now the executive administrator of Path with Art, an organization that seeks to heal individuals from the effects of trauma through the arts. Going for walks, listening to podcasts, cooking, and new clothes make me happy. I hope to bring a sense of curiosity and willingness to learn to my role on the planning commission. I care deeply about equity and creating opportunity for others, but I also recognize that often that having the humility to get out of others' way and truly listening. I hope to learn how the planning commission seeks to strike this balance and how a bureaucratic body can work for its community. I love learning from others and I am excited to meet my fellow commissioners, hear their paths to the commission, and what motivates them.
