Background: Caitlin Truong is an architectural designer at Schemata Workshop, artist, and educator. She has worked on affordable housing projects, community centers, transit-oriented developments, and public art pieces across Seattle. Caitlin was born and raised in South Beacon Hill where her community consists predominantly of low-income households, immigrants, and refugees. While on the Seattle Design Commission, she hopes to use her community centered design perspective to advocate for communities of color. Caitlin completed her Bachelor of Arts in Architectural Design with Departmental Honors at the University of Washington with minors in Art History and Environmental Science. She was involved in leadership on campus with her efforts being recognized for the 2023 Department of Architecture Faculty Award for Scholarship & Leadership and the 2023 American Institute of Architects Seattle Allied Organization Award.

Seattle Design Commission

The Seattle Design Commission advises the Mayor, City Council, and City departments on the design and environmental implications of City funded projects, projects seeking long-term or permanent use of a right of way, or public projects seeking City approval. The Commission is comprised of 10 members, as established by Seattle Municipal Code Section 3.58. Members serve a two year term and are eligible for two consecutive terms. All members are appointed by the Mayor and confirmed by the City Council.

A Chair is also appointed on each year. The Chair is selected by Commissioners for appointment by the Mayor and confirmation by the Council.

New appointments are underlined.
