Honorary Street Designation Practice Overview

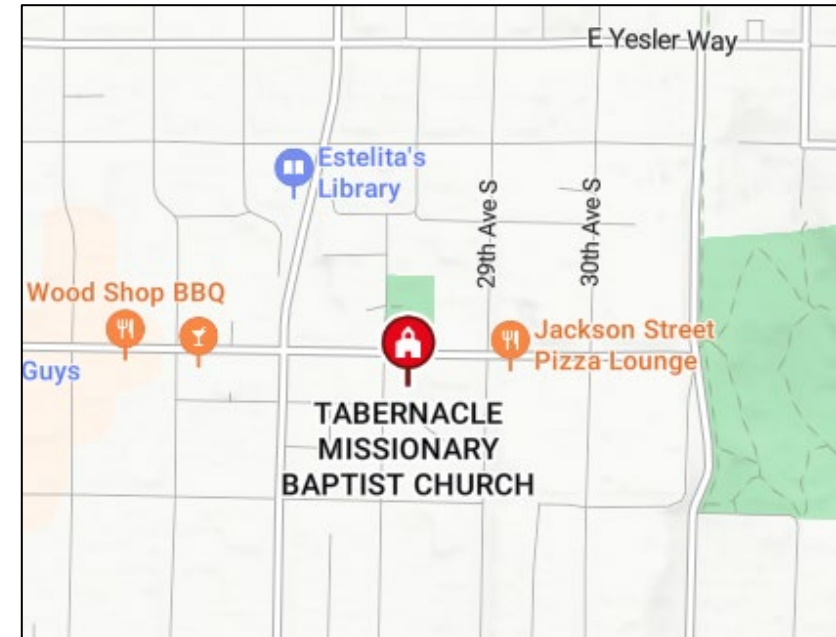

- Though no formal rules have been adopted by Council to govern honorary street designations, the practice is that by Council Resolution an honorary name for a single block of a street is given.
- Legal street names do not change, nor do the addresses of parcels, buildings or units on the street.
- The person or group requesting the honorary designation should identify a sponsor on the City Council, or the Mayor may work with Council to sponsor an honorary designation.
- Costs to produce and install the honorary signs are paid by the person or group requesting the designation or by the sponsor's office.
