Background

Sweetened Beverage Tax

Supporting healthy food and child health and development

Beginning in 2018, Seattle started taxing sugar-sweetened beverage products distributed within the city (Ordinance 125324). The Sweetened Beverage Tax (SBT) is not a sales tax charged directly on consumers. Instead, this tax makes distributors pay a tax (of 1.75 cents per ounce) on sugar-sweetened beverage products they distribute within the City of Seattle.

Why did Seattle pass this tax?

The tax was designed to improve the health of Seattle residents by reducing the sales and consumption of sugary drinks. In addition, the tax revenue is primarily used to support healthy food access, child development, and early learning programs. Research has shown that sugary drinks can lead to long-term weight gain, which can increase risk of developing type 2 diabetes, high blood pressure, and heart disease. Sugary drinks also lead to cavities. A 20-ounce bottle of soda can pack over 15 teaspoons of added sugar and over 250 calories with poor nutritional value.

- SBT started in 2018
- Tax is levied on distributors of sugary beverages \(1.75 cents per ounce\)
- Designed to improve the health of Seattle residents by reducing the sales and consumption of sugary drinks
- Raises revenue for programs that increase food security and access to healthy food, and support children's health and early learning (SMC 5.53.055)

Community Efforts to Design the SBT

In 2017, community coalitions led efforts to ensure SBT revenue would be reinvested to benefit low-income communities and communities of color and close the food security gap.

This is a legacy the CAB continues today.

The Need

Food Security Programs

- Food security is essential to health, wellbeing, and child development.
- 11% of Seattle residents experience food insecurity.
- Due to socioeconomic inequities, rates of food insecurity are significantly higher for BIPOC households, low-income households, and households with children.

Prenatal-to-Three Programs

- Prenatal to age three period of development sets the foundation for all future health and wellbeing.
- Infants and toddlers need loving, stimulating, stable, and secure care environments.
- Social, economic, and environmental disparities and adversity in the early years of a child's life lead to disparities in health and educational outcomes later.

Prenatal-to-Three Programs

SBT Investments (DEEL)	Impact Snapshot*
Prenatal-to-Three Community Grants Program	10 grassroots organizations awarded $1.5 million in funding
Child Care Assistance Program	733 income-eligible families (85% BIPOC) benefitted from subsidies
Health & Developmental Supports	178 children served with intensive developmental support
Home Visiting/Parent Child+	290 families served with home visiting supports (46 visits per family)
Birth-to-Three Provider Coaching and Training	22 classrooms received high-quality coaching
Family Child Care (FCC) Support	35 FCC providers participated in new home visiting model

*Data is from 2021 and includes only the SBT-funded outcomes. Our 2022 report will be coming out this year.

Food Security Programs

SBT Investments	Impact Snapshot*
Community grants (DON)	35 food justice organizations awarded $1.2 million
Fresh Bucks (OSE)	12,100 enrolled households; $5.2 million in produce benefits redeemed
Food banks (HSD)	270,000 food banks visits at 18 food bank organizations and 20 locations
Meal programs (HSD)	1,200,000 meals provided in community and elder congregate meal settings
Farm to Preschool (HSD)	36,000 produce bags (43% local, 30% BIPOC farms) distributed in preschools sites
Healthy Food in Schools (OSE)	4,000 students (15 schools) served fruit and veggie snacks, 4x/week, every week
Water filling stations (OSE)	8 new water filling stations installed at low-income schools (20 installations total)
Food Policy (OSE)	Staffing and community engagement to update the Food Action Plan

*Data is from 2021 and includes only the SBT-funded outcomes unless otherwise noted. Our 2022 report will be coming out this year.

 In 2021, SBT funds to support community grant programs were transferred from HSD to DON. In 2021, DON extended the grants of the HSD grantees while it designed and planned for the release of what is now called the Food Equity Fund. Today, the Food Equity Fund is $2.3 million per year ongoing.

Policy Considerations

Key Points

- Food security and prenatal-to-three programs/services are essential to a healthy, thriving and equitable Seattle.
- There are identified needs and opportunities in these programs/services, e.g.:
 - Increase offerings of culturally relevant foods and services in hunger relief programs
 - Invest in culturally and linguistically relevant outreach for the Developmental Bridge program
 - Expand the Food Equity Fund (which saw $10.5 million in funding requests with $3.8 million available in 2022; in 2023, only $2.3 million is available)
 - Increase Fresh Bucks customer service supports and enroll waitlisted households
 - Invest in actions identified in the Food Action Plan Update to foster an equitable food system
- Structural constraints with SBT limit the SBT Fund from meeting current and future needs.

2023 Budget Process and Beyond

- SBT Fund faced a budget gap in 2022 and 2023.
- Cuts to critical prenatal-to-three and food security programs were on the table.
 - We worked with departments to identify strategic reductions that would not impact direct services for residents in need. But this means the current SBT spending plan is as bare bones as possible.
- FG-903-A-001-2023 in the Select Budget Committee's Initial Balancing Package transferred $1.2 million JumpStart Fund in 2023 and 2024 (one-time) to SBT Fund to keep programs whole through 2024.
- If we face 2025 with the current forecast and the SBT Fund's planning reserve is $0 and the $1.2 million JumpStart allocations ends, there will be a shortfall.

Structural Issues with SBT

- SBT does not adjust for inflation. Meanwhile, inflation and food prices continue to be historically high—a serious issue for food insecure households and food security programs.
 - In 2022, food prices increased by 9.9 percent. Food-at-home prices (groceries) increased by 11.4 percent, while food-away-from-home prices increased by 7.7 percent (USDA Food Price Outlook 2023).
- SBT could be a declining revenue source (by design).
 - While studies measuring the impact of SBT on consumption are showing mixed results, one study using Nielsen grocery store scanner data suggested there was a 22 percent immediate, sustained reduction in taxed beverage volume sold up to 2-years post-tax (reviewed in Powell LM et al. 2022).
- SBT tax rate cannot be changed due to an industry-backed initiative (WA I-1624) that prohibits local governments from enacting sugary beverage taxes and prohibits any existing taxes, fees, or assessments from being increased after January 15, 2018.

Recommendations

1. Identify alternative revenue resources to plug anticipated 2025 SBT shortfall. Further cuts to food security and prenatal-to-three services should not be an option.
2. City's new Revenue Stabilization Work Group needs to consider structural issues with SBT.
3. Food security and prenatal-to-three programs/services need diverse and progressive revenue streams to meet urgent need in communities.

City of Seattle Forms Revenue Stabilization Work Group

by Jamie Housen on October 11, 2022

Balanced team of experienced, policy-minded civic leaders will develop and recommend innovative long-term solutions to halt increasing General Fund revenue gap and address regressive tax system

Seattle – Today, Mayor Bruce Harrell and Councilmember Teresa Mosqueda (Pos. 8 – Citywide) announced the formation of the City's Revenue Stabilization Work Group. The group includes a diverse array of local leaders and policy experts, who will analyze issues and recommend solutions at the intersection of the City's increasing General Fund budget revenue gap and reliance on declining and regressive tax sources.
