Background:  Ann Luetzow is deeply committed to working towards equity and inclusion within our systems and institutions to foster stronger, safer, and more unified communities in Seattle and beyond. Having grown up in Racine, Wisconsin, they do not take being an out and loud queer person for granted, and also recognize the need to keep fighting for justice here in Seattle. Further, they desire to leverage their privilege and fierce dedication to liberation to carve space for others to pursue their aspirations. Ann is graduating from the University of Washington School of Social Work with an MSW and a concentration in Public Policy and Administration in Spring 2017. As an undergraduate student at the UW, they founded the D Center (a d/Disability and d/Deaf cultural center) from their position within the student government, and obtained a BA in Disability Studies in 2012. Ann brings a wide variety of interests and passions to the Commission, from anti-displacement policy development, to inclusive youth programming and suicide prevention for LGBTQ youth. As a white person, they strive to center an anti-racist lens in their work, and have experience facilitating white caucuses and engaging in organizing for racial justice. They are interested in policy, research, pedagogy, and creative knowledge production.
