Background: Taylor is a community advocate, artist, and organizer who moved to Seattle in 2014. After graduating from the University of South Florida with a degree in Government and International Affairs, Taylor did communications work for political campaigns in Philadelphia, Tampa, and Seattle. He currently works as a team manager for a well-known transportation firm headquartered in the Seattle area. Taylor has been an active volunteer for his community since he was young. He served as President of the Gay Straight Alliance at his school, as Chair of his universities' Delphi Senate , and as an organizer and public speaker for various political campaigns and organizations. Presently, Taylor is a graduate student at the Evans School of Public Policy and Governance and hopes to attain a Master's in Public Administration with a focus on metropolitan and urban policy. Taylor enjoys cooking, camping, hiking, reading and video games. He looks forward to working on the LGBTQ Commission's plan to obtain more accurate metrics regarding the demographic information of Seattle's LGBTQ population in order so that the Commission may make better informed policy advisements and agendas.
