2022 Midterm Election Outlook

Well into President Joe Biden's second year in office, Democrats are fighting to maintain control of their House and Senate majorities.

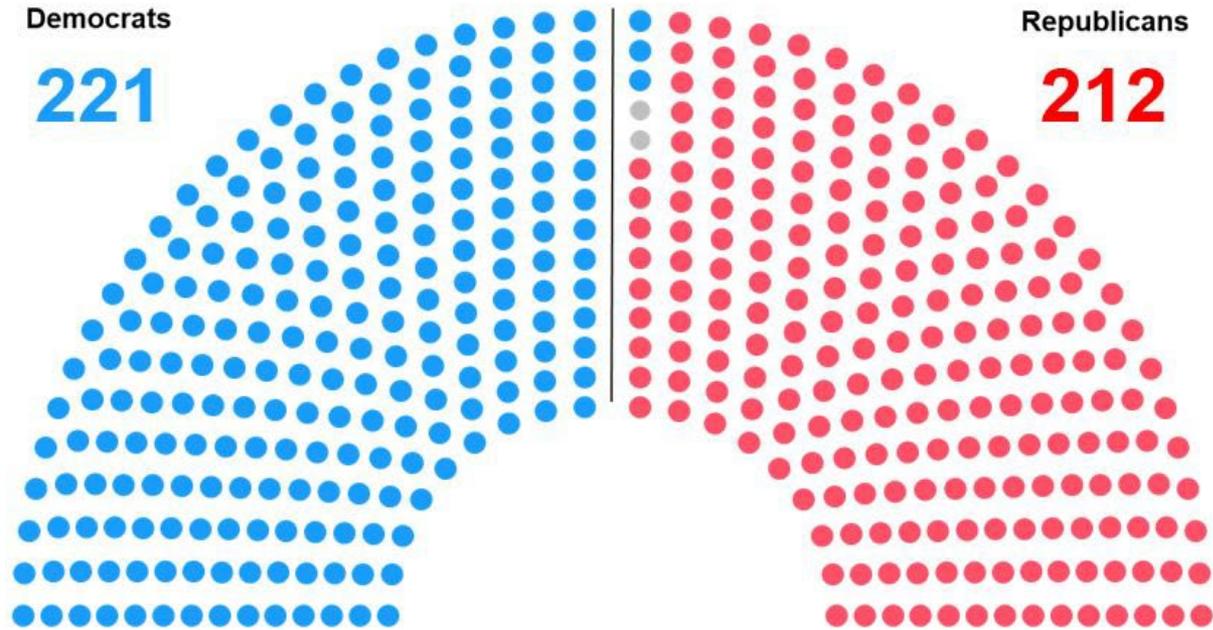

Senate

- Democrats control the 50-50 chamber by virtue of Vice President Kamala Harris' tie-breaking vote and are defending four competitive seats.
- Republicans are defending more seats overall but only five are competitive.
- A net change of one seat in either direction alters the balance of the chamber, giving Democrats a clear majority or handing control to Republicans.

House

- A shift of only five seats would transfer control of the chamber to Republicans.
- Redistricting is a variable, as both parties have used their respective power in the states to draw district lines and have filed lawsuits to challenge maps.
- Biden's low approval rating and inflation are likely to be anchors on Democratic incumbents.

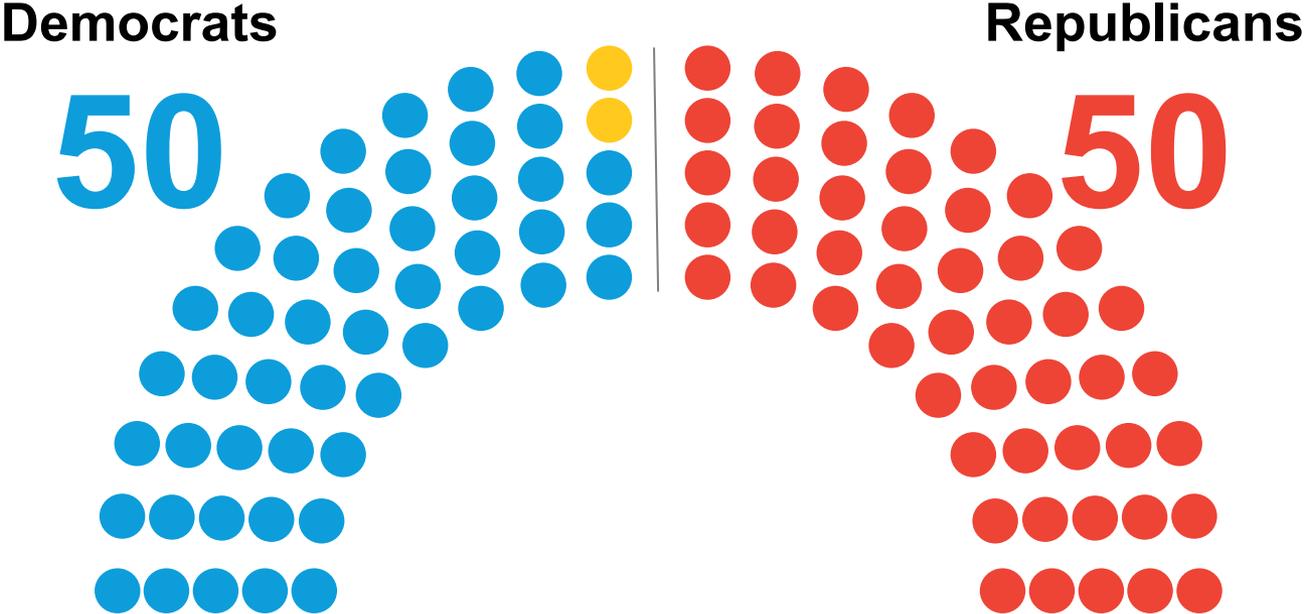

House Balance of Power

House Outlook

- Republicans need a net gain of five seats to win control of the House.
- Democrats' historically small margin and the tendency for the president's party to lose seats in midterms gives GOP the advantage.
- Redistricting plays a significant factor: new lines have altered the competitiveness of numerous districts; the number of competitive seats declined; some incumbents running for re-election in new territory; 6 incumbent vs. incumbent races.
- The Biden administration's politics, policies, and polling will shape the national atmosphere, as midterms are generally viewed as a referendum on the president.
- The Dobbs decision shifted the national landscape, making the Republicans' prospects of winning a 20+ seat majority unlikely.

Senate Balance of Power

Note: Yellow indicates independents who caucus with Democrats

Senate Outlook

- Republican Advantages

- Need to net only one seat to take control of 50-50 chamber.
- Biden’s approval rating remains below 50%.
- Targeting two seats that flipped to Democrats narrowly in 2020 special elections in traditionally GOP-leaning states that Biden also won.
- Campaign committee, aligned super PAC began 2022 with far more cash on hand than Democratic counterparts.

- Democratic Advantages

- Not defending any competitive open seats or seats in states Trump won in 2020.
- Targeting three GOP seats where the incumbent is retiring.
- Races for the Senate are less susceptible to election waves than for the House. It is possible good campaigns overcome the bad environment
- The Supreme Court overturning Roe v. Wade means abortion rights could drive turnout among Democratic voters.
